

CARE PLANNING CHECKLIST FOR CAREGIVERS LATER STAGES

Your caregiving role is dependent on the needs of the person with dementia. In the later stages, a person with dementia has significant challenges performing tasks. The person might need help with almost all their care needs. They may have severe cognitive impairment and difficulty communicating their needs. At this stage, preparations for end-of-life care are made. This is when that advanced care plan you made is put into action. The focus of care is now on comfort and sensory connection.

The following suggestions are for consideration only and offered as a guide. Remember, you do not need to do everything yourself!

Education and Support

- ☐ Contact the Dementia Society. Register for Caregiver Support Groups Click Here
- ☐ Speak with your Dementia Care Coach. Discuss strategies for connecting with your loved one.
- ☐ Know that you will enter a new phase of grieving. You will need support through this stage. Ask your coach about grief support and resources in the community.

The Caregiving Role

- ☐ If you have not yet made an advanced care plan, Click Here to learn more.
- ☐ If your loved one has moved into a care home, you may wish to visit often at first. As the person adjusts to their new environment, your visits may occur less often.
- □ No matter where the person lives, your role is to inform, recommend, and encourage the best quality of care.
 - ☐ The goal is comfort care. Assist in providing comfort measures as appropriate.
 - ☐ Maintain dignity of the person.

Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure.	The need for companionship remains.
Communicate through sensory experiences like touch, music, reading aloud, reminiscing, etc. Re-assure: I'm here with you, you are safe. Use a therapeutic touch, hold their hand. Spend positive time with the person. Reminisce or recall humorous experiences. Find comfort in the silence. Communicate according to the abilities of the person. Be a good listener. Provide spiritual support in line with the person's wishes and life history. Arrange pastoral care or faith leader visits if appropriate. Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Seffective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available - Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics - Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life
Re-assure: I'm here with you, you are safe. Use a therapeutic touch, hold their hand. Spend positive time with the person. Reminisce or recall humorous experiences. Find comfort in the silence. Communicate according to the abilities of the person. Be a good listener. Provide spiritual support in line with the person's wishes and life history. Arrange pastoral care or faith leader visits if appropriate. Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Felt the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over.	·
□ Spend positive time with the person. Reminisce or recall humorous experiences. □ Find comfort in the silence. □ Communicate according to the abilities of the person. Be a good listener. □ Provide spiritual support in line with the person's wishes and life history. Arrange pastoral care or faith leader visits if appropriate. □ Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. □ If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. □ Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. □ If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff □ Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. □ Give positive feedback. □ Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. □ Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. □ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. □ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. ■ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to Find comfort in the silence. Communicate according to the abilities of the person. Be a good listener. Provide spiritual support in line with the person's wishes and life history. Arrange pastoral care or faith leader visits if appropriate. Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available - Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics - Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away - Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize t
Communicate according to the abilities of the person. Be a good listener. Provide spiritual support in line with the person's wishes and life history. Arrange pastoral care or faith leader visits if appropriate. Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available — Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics — Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away — Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure.
Provide spiritual support in line with the person's wishes and life history. Arrange pastoral care or faith leader visits if appropriate. Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. visits if appropriate. Gommunicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing. If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure.
If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like. Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available - Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics - Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away - Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure.
Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home. If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure.	☐ Communicate regularly with family members and friends on how the person is doing.
□ If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home. Working with Healthcare Staff □ Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. □ Give positive feedback. □ Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. □ Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. □ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. □ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. • Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ If the person is in a care home, make the environment home-like.
Working with Healthcare Staff □ Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. □ Give positive feedback. □ Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. □ Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. □ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. □ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. • Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Decorate the room with seasonal decorations and appropriate articles from home.
Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them. Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ If a brain autopsy has been requested, tell the doctor, the Retirement or Care Home, and the Funeral Home.
Give positive feedback. Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure.	Working with Healthcare Staff
 Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care. □ Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. □ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. □ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. • Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca 	☐ Get to know the staff, maintain regular contact with them.
□ Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort. □ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. □ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. □ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the	☐ Give positive feedback.
□ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date. □ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available – Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. □ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Make sure that health care staff know the person's wishes for end of life care.
□ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan. □ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. □ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Communicate with staff any signs of discomfort.
□ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have. □ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. □ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Provide the life history for care staff to read. Make sure it is up-to-date.
□ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. ■ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ If the person is in a care facility, attend care conferences. Help in the development of the care plan.
□ After the Move: Working and Communicating with Staff fact sheet available − Click Here Caring for Yourself □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. ■ Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Use effective communication skills when talking to staff about any concerns you have.
 □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca
 □ Share the care. Enlist others to sit with the person. Plan a schedule for visiting with family and friends. □ Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. □ Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	Caring for Vourself
 Make sure you schedule some self-care such as physical exercise each day. Reconnect with pleasurable activities you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics − Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca you once did. Participate in grief support. Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away Reach out to your support network. Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca
 Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here □ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca
□ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life. If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away − Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Participate in grief support.
If Your Loved One Passes Away □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	• Learn about dementia-related grief such as Grief Characteristics – Click Here
 □ Reach out to your support network. □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca 	☐ Take satisfaction for the role you have played to promote quality of life.
 □ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca 	If Your Loved One Passes Away
 □ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person. □ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca 	☐ Reach out to your support network.
□ Feel the emotions that come up. It's okay to feel pain or to feel relief that the journey is over. Recognize the significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Review a checklist of what to do after someone passes away – Click Here
significance and the challenges that come with closure. Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org DementiaHelp.ca	☐ Reminisce about the person's life, accomplishments, and their life story. Celebrate the life of the person.
	Ottawa: 613-523-4004 Renfrew-County: 1-888-411-2067 info@dsorc.org Dementia Help.ca	